NOV -6 1922

Left at the saloon unconscious, Art is rescued from the Sioux by a band of friendly Pawnees. News of the Sioux attack reaches Thomas B. Durant, chief contractor and vice-president of the U.P. who determine to complete construction of the railroad at any cost. Meanwhile, in Washington, President Johnson welcomes a distinguished guest from England, Charles Dickens.

In the West, undaunted by the death of their claim comrades, new workmen arrive to carry on the railway project and brave the wily redskin. Ashley, determined to smuggle a wagonload of liquor into the labor camp to demoralize the workmen, changes the wagon tops so the liquor vehicle is camouflaged as a U.P. emergency hospital ambulance and the ambulance, containing Alice, resembles the whiskey wagon. Art, fooled by the substitution, is made prisoner while the wagon containing Alice breaks down on a railroad track in the path of an onrushing locomotive.
